It involves breathing in pure oxygen at high pressures. The treatment helps reduce inflammation and promote healing by increasing the blood supply and oxygen levels to the affected area. By increasing the pressure in the blood vessels and surrounding tissues, HBOT can effectively address all three components of the inflammatory response, reducing swelling, pain, and the influx of neutrophils and macrophages. Several studies have found that HBOT reduces the rate of infection and increases the chance of healing in cases of diabetic foot ulcers, and that it is a less costly method of treatment compared to surgery. Studies on animal models have also found that it is effective in treating chronic, non-healing wounds. Medical uses HBOT is used to treat diabetic foot ulcers, venous stasis ulcers, bed sores, and other types of skin wounds. Research has also shown that it is effective in healing certain types of bone infection, especially around metal implants. In one study, 10 patients with infected atypical femoral fractures that had not healed were treated with HBOT. After 4 months, five patients had a complete fracture healing, while five others had not completed the study. Reasons for concern The treatment is also associated with risks. In a study of health professionals who had used the treatment for the treatment of pressure ulcers, more than half had experienced minor side effects including dizziness, loss of consciousness, a

I'd like to give advice to people who are currently struggling with this disease. It would be very helpful if you visit this blog as well. Thanks. Wednesday, September 18, 2012 How do you get sober? In the beginning there is no beginning. There is only not long ago, not now. This is just the way it is. It's kind of like one long cut in time. I know what you mean by the "not now" thing. One day you are sober, then you get out of rehab and you're fine, then a few days later you get drunk again and find yourself wandering the halls of your home that you share with your wife and kids. This is just the way it is and it's not about me or you, it's about all of us who are addicted to drugs and alcohol. There is something called a "day in the life of a drug addict", and it's usually pretty depressing. It's something we need to overcome, if we want to stay sober. We feel like shit all the time because we feel like shit. People who are sober for years will tell you that it's a miserable life in the end. The worst is when you're alone. You sit there in your corner, your head is full of junk and you just sit there alone in your misery. The thing is, you never really thought you could get better. In fact, you couldn't help thinking that it would get worse. It gets worse. You start wondering if you will ever get better. You start wondering if you'll ever make it home. Then you start thinking about your past failures. You
